THE COMMERCIAL HOUSE BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire Starts in Basement and Goes to Roof Doing $3,000 Damage

An alarm of fire at 2:40 o'clock this morning from No. 10, at the corner of Dover and Vaughan streets, called the fire department to the Commercial house on Main street, owned and conducted by Mrs. Hannah McSweeney. The department responded promptly and on their arrival found a lively blaze in progress in the basement. The fire was kept confined to the rear part of the house and the occupants remained in the front part of the house. The fire was extinguished by the firemen before the all out signal was sounded. Chief Engineer Randall stated this morning that the fire was one of the most obstinate that the department has had to contend with for many days. The damage to the hotel by smoke and water is estimated between $2500 and $3000. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

THE CHURCH IN SOCIAL SERVICE

Rev. Levi M. Powers, D. D., of Haverhill, pastor of the Universalist church of that city, was the speaker at the People's Forum at the Universalist church on Sunday evening. His subject was "The Church in Social Service."

The speaker took up a subject that is of vital interest at the present time and his talk was interesting and brilliant and it showed a close study of the situation.

A very pleasing musical program was given.

THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER.

It will be welcome news to the lovers of music as well as comedy to learn that the great comic opera of modern times, "The Chocolate Soldier" is to play a limited engagement at the Majestic Theatre following the present attraction. The Strauss opera played to a record business in this house last year, and during the six weeks of the engagement many hundreds were disappointed in not being able to obtain seats. To these particularly its second advent in this city will be welcome, especially as it will be interpreted by practically the same splendid cast as gave it here during its long run.

"The Chocolate Soldier" is one of the few operas of the present day that can be heard over and over again with even more delight than on a first hearing, and so it is confidently expected that many who saw the work before will renew their pleasant acquaintance with its inimitable comedy and its glorious music, than which there has been none more popular written since the days of Gilbert and Sullivan.

When "The Chocolate Soldier" came here last year it was direct from The Casino in New York where it made a record run of 300 nights and its interpretation was said by the critics at that time to be well high perfect. In some respects, particularly in the prima donna role of Nadina and the title role of the "Chocolate Soldier," the cast has been strengthened. Miss Alice York is the leading soprano and it has been said that no more delightful performance of this great part has ever been given. Charles H. Bowers is the "Chocolate Soldier" and the country has rung with praise of his work. Miss Juanita Fletcher has the sprightly role of Masha, and she is said to put more nerve into it than any of her predecessors. The balance of the cast remains exactly as it was during its former presentation here. George Tallman and Francis J. Boyle have played their parts continually since the opening performance two years ago, and the other original members of the cast are Mildred Rogers, formerly of the Boston Grand Opera company, and George O'Donnell.

OBSEQUIES.

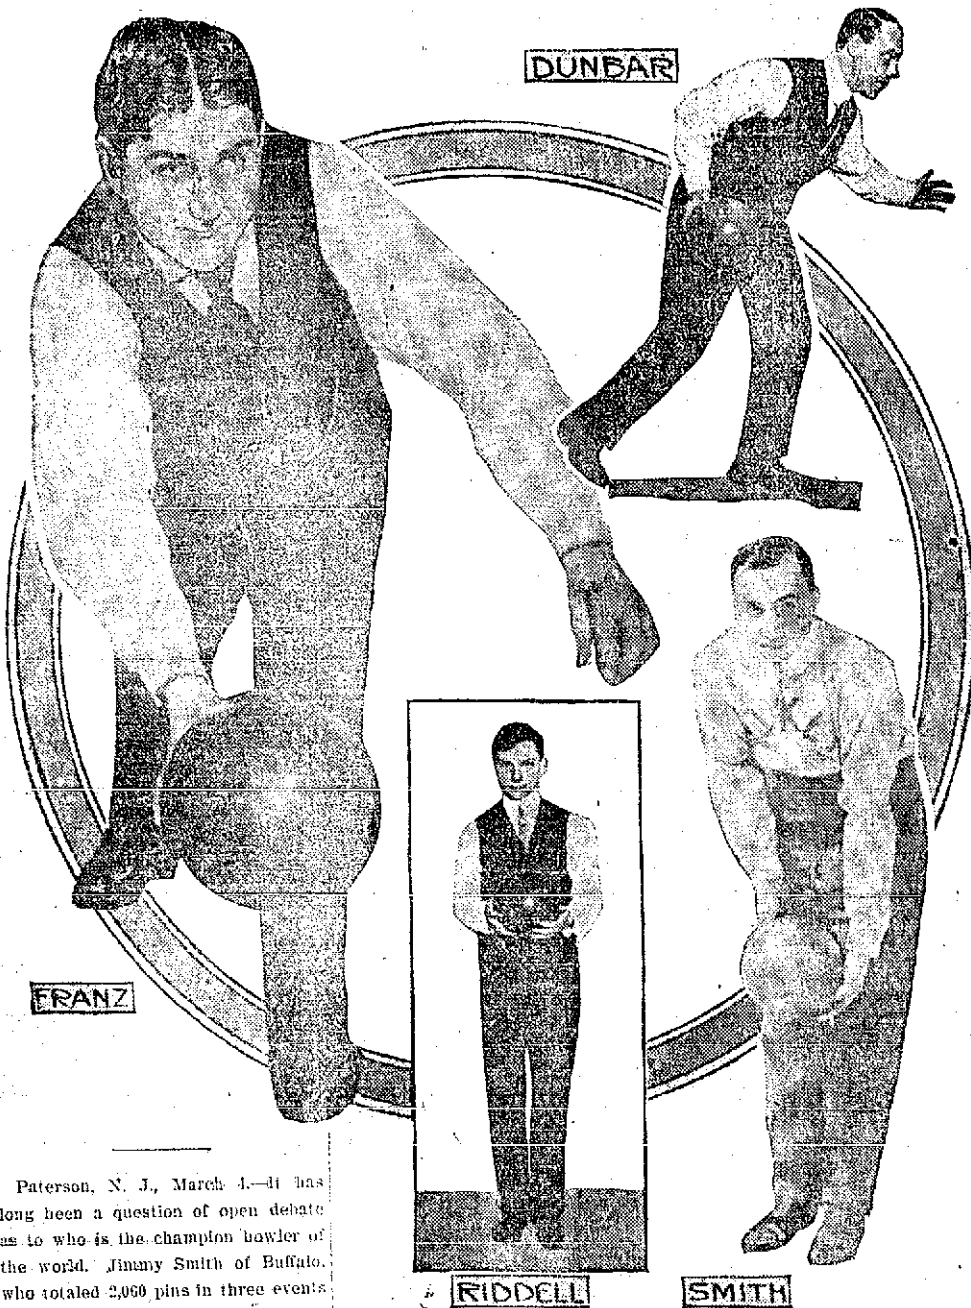

James T. Berry.

The funeral of James T. Berry was held at 2:30 Sunday afternoon from his home in Kittery, Rev. A. J. Hayes, pastor of the Second Methodist church, officiating. The body was placed in Philbrick's tomb, until spring by Undertaker H. W. Nickerson.

Four of America's Best Ten Pin Artists Who May Bowl for World's Title

Patterson, N. J., March 4.—It has long been a question of open debate as to who is the champion bowler of the world. Jimmy Smith of Buffalo, who totaled 2,000 pins in three events at Toronto, Canada, recently, is considered by many to be title holder; but, then again, there are many western fans who think Glen Fisher or Dave Woodbury of Chicago ought to be given a look in when world's title holder is selected. Dave Franz of Cleveland also has a host of admirers, and Alex Dunbar and Glen Riddell of New York are not without their staunch supporters. A proposition has at last been made which appears as though it might furnish at least a temporary solution to this vexing question. The promoters of the sixth annual tournament of the National Bowling association, which is to be held in this city from March 9 to 30, have sent an invitation to each of the six bowlers to compete in a round tournament on the N. B. A. alleys, and judging from present indications will be accepted. In addition to a substantial cash inducement, the tournament committee will present the winner with a handsome diamond medal emblematic of the world's championship.

which the Taft-Roosevelt contest will involve. For Senator Lodge of Massachusetts it creates a peculiarly difficult problem.

The precise effect of the Roosevelt address before the Ohio constitutional convention it is difficult to determine, taking the country by and large. At Washington and in the East it unquestionably has lessened the likelihood that the "moderates" will ally themselves with the Roosevelt candidacy. Whether it will have the same result in the interior and the West where support of the method of "pure democracy" in dealing with government is more vigorous, remains to be seen. Of course, the contest for delegates to the national convention will now be waged more fiercely, and it is to be noted that the direct presidential primaries, favored by the former President are multiplying.

Among the independent voters of the country who stand somewhat aloof from the more strenuous political maneuverings and ambitions of the rival candidates of both parties, the issue raised by this latest turn of events will be discussed in the light of Mr. Roosevelt's previous pledges, his natural duties and loyalties to the man he named as his successor, and the desirability of a nation coming to depend upon any man as a foreordained guide of national affairs.

The strenuousness of the conflict that lies ahead need not make it unduly personal in character. The country will not welcome a prearranged campaign of epithets or the public cleansing of soiled party linen.—Christian Science Monitor.

Milady's Mirror

Frowns Versus Smiles.

It is one of the incongruities of the beauty search that women will spend the greater part of an hour before their glass, attempting to aid nature in her good intentions and conceal her little malices, only to destroy the whole carefully built structure by frowns and grimaces.

This futile attempt at facial art is like yelling an exquisite picture with an air of heaviness and foreboding, painting it in wonderful colors and then drawing across the fair surface harsh black lines. Streak the greatest masterpiece with dark pencil marks, dim its luster with a dull gray atmosphere, and it becomes a thing of ugliness, without value and without charm.

The face is nature's canvas of beauty upon which she spreads the colors of her palette according to the wisdom of the owner. She does her best, and if we choose to mar the result with wrinkled brow, deep frowns and fine lines the blame should be placed where it rightfully belongs. Notice that nice business women out of every ten force two deep frown lines between the eyebrows. This is done in a mistaken effort to appear serious, perhaps to give an impression of deep thought and mental gymnastics. As a matter of fact, it succeeds only in creating an air of extreme unrest. No conversation, business or social, is impressive unless accompanied by perfect harmony and poise. Frowns are not indicative of great mentality, as all the world is aware brains are not dependent upon facial contortions.

These frown lines often come from a constant state of worry. They are the outward and visible signs of the trouble borrows, the people who carry an umbrella no matter how sunny the skies. One girl of extraordinary beauty spoiled the whole effect of her perfect contour and coloring by frowning a deep ugly line just above the bridge of her nose. No amount of massage or electrical treatment availed in the eradication of this disfigurement, for no sooner would the line begin to grow dim than she would return to the old habit.

Long lines across the brow, the result of elevating the eyebrows to assist in conversation, is a common mistake against which too much cannot be said. These seams continue to grow deeper with each year until they become fixed and dark, carrying with them the appearance of age and anxiety. By all means massage them with a good cold cream, using a rotary movement, and then practice talking without the eyebrow accompaniment before your mirror, say, a half hour at a time. Persistence in this treatment will bring about its abandonment. Be careful not to draw the eyes into unnatural lines when laughing.

Wrinkle Removers.

Rubber bands for removing wrinkles in the forehead are being tried by many women, who are enthusiastic over the success they have had. The bands are flat and shaped to fit the forehead, having a small point extending down in front over the nose. Before adjusting the band the forehead should be rubbed with cold cream and a little of the same cream smeared over the inside of the rubber strip. Then it should be fastened in place by means of tapes. If the rubber band is too tight a headache may result. It should be remembered that the virtue of such an appliance lies in its heating properties. After the band has been worn a little while the inside becomes coated with perspiration, which helps to cause the wrinkles to disappear. The rubber piece should be cleaned carefully after it is used, each time by wiping off the cold cream with a cloth. The forehead should also be given further treatment with dashes of cold water to restore the circulation and close the pores of the skin.

Treatment For Oily Scalp.
An oily scalp is bad for the hair. When it falls from oiliness it is a sure sign that the glands are distended, and the hair which grows in tiny tubes and through which the oil runs to feed and nourish it cannot drink it up as fast as it exudes from the pores; therefore it oozes out on the surface of the scalp and becomes mingled with the hair, making it greasy and heavy. The hair itself is overfed, becomes rotten and falls. Never be tempted to give the hair a dry shampoo. No powder was ever made that can take the place of a good soap jelly and water to shampoo with. Besides, the powders close the pores, thereby creating an unhealthy condition, for, no matter how the hair may be brushed after the powder application, some will remain.

For the Parted Coiffure.
Now that the parted coiffure is fashionable and women whose hair is either thin or gray on top are despairing about ever being able to adopt the modish headdress experts are preparing false pieces to cover up such deficiencies and signs of age. Little caps or flat sections are made of milady's combings and worn on top of the head. These are constructed on a very fine net, with a realistic part, and are held in place by fine wire hairpins just the color of the hair or by tiny shell combs. They are easy to adjust and cannot be detected when worn with a carefully arranged coiffure.

CHILDREN HAVE A MERRY AND NOVEL DANCING PARTY

Pupils of Mrs. Julia Chase in Big Advertising Exhibition.

Mrs. Julia Chase gave her juvenile dancing class a novel and very pretty affair on Saturday afternoon at the Freeman's hall annex. It was in the nature of an advertising party, with each of the children dressed to represent some well known article which has been advertised, and some of the costumes were very unique and very pretty, and all true to the style followed in the advertising of the articles.

The hall was very prettily decorated, the entire side walls and galleries being covered with the posters and placards of the different articles. The affair was from three to five thirty and there was a large attendance of the parents and friends of the teacher and children.

Mrs. Chase, who was dressed to represent "Black Cat Hosiery," wore a striking costume of yellow, trimmed with pastebord black cats and trade marks of the hosiery, received the children and Fred Holland and Henry Margeson acted as ushers.

The reception was followed by a grand march led by Miss Monica Gray and Wesley Smith and dancing followed, for which Mrs. T. F. Planagan and Miss Barbara Manning presided at the piano.

At the conclusion refreshments of ices and cake were served and all voted it the merriest and most novel time. The details of the affair were unlimited and reflect great credit on Mrs. Chase. She was assisted by Miss Georgine Moses, who represented "Lincoln's Castle Soap," and Miss Barbara Planagan as "Purina Health Food."

The dance orders were also very unique and in keeping with the entire entertainment. Mrs. Chase gave a similar party to her junior class on Friday evening, which was equally as successful.

SUFFRAGIST AND LETTER-BOXES.

At Bow-street Police Court on Thursday last week Emily Wilding Davison, a teacher, was committed for trial on a charge of attempting to place in the post office letter-box at Parliament-street Post Office a quantity of lighted linen saturated with kerosene, and in a letter-box at the Fleet-street Post Office a box of wax matches wrapped in linen and paper and saturated with kerosene, to which she had set light. The defendant stated that her motive was to protest against the sentence passed upon Mary Leigh, a suffragist, and also because she wished to call upon the Government to put woman suffrage in the King's Speech on February 14 next.—London Times.

For PORTSMOUTH and PORTSMOUTH'S INTERESTS

MONDAY, MARCH 4, 1912.

A president of one of the largest eastern trunk lines has been contending for an agreement to lengthen the fast freight schedule between New York and Chicago from 60 to 80 hours because rates and traffic do not warrant such a fast and expensive service. The president referred to was told he was trying to "put this over" because his road found it impossible to maintain a 60-hour schedule. To disprove this theory, the insurgent road is now delivering between these two cities in 54 hours or better than many other lines can do under most favorable summer weather, railroad diplomats always carry a club up their sleeves.

Northwestern New Hampshire should have direct connection with New Hampshire's only seaport. The rails should be related between Suncook and Candia. The Bristol branch should be extended to one end of the bridge separating Ashland from Bridgewater. Let trade follow its natural routes. New Hampshire should take better care of her seaport. Portsmouth should better care for herself. At least two trains a day, south, over the White Mountain division, should divide at Lakeport, one section, a complete train, running direct to Portsmouth. Let New Hampshire do all it can to bring Portsmouth business. Why turn everything to Boston, and make it difficult to reach our own? Humanity shudders at a mother unkind to her own. New Hampshire comes all too near to being an unnatural mother. Connection between sections of New Hampshire is incomplete.—Lebanon Free Press.

We heartily endorse the above. Portsmouth should be made a distributing point for New Hampshire.

There are many ways of advertising and no body who has experience will deny that some kinds of advertising bring better results than do others. It is something of a tribute to the efficacy of advertising in the newspaper when a man who does a great deal of it comments on the daily press. This gentleman is at the head of a great automobile selling agency in New York, and it is his business to seek out channels through which he can most readily reach purchasers. He finds the best way lies through the advertising columns of first the evening and second the morning newspapers. He says that having made a fair trial of all kinds he intends to cut down the announcements in other quarters and give the greater part of his advertising to the daily papers. His explanation is businesslike and logical. "Everybody reads the newspapers carefully nowadays, the evening edition more thoroughly than the morning probably because of more time, and a picture of our car at a timely display, should catch the eye of the man who is interested in the subject as soon as he picks up his paper. We stand a better chance of hearing from him promptly than if he saw the announcement in a publication which he picks up at random once a month or so." This man is certainly a shrewd observer and he puts the case a bit as it is. The newspaper readers are the best purchasers, and it is why the newspaper advertisement brings the advertiser his largest and best rewards.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

Presidential booms are being stood up so thick that they are bound to "go" one another when a bandwagon rounds a curve.

The manner in which trust magnates forget their early business professions proves how much better a real business man's foresight is than his hindsight.

No advocate of economy in public affairs can devise a scheme that will effectively guard against a waste of words.

It seems possible that the "ham dog" will become a more potent political emblem than the Missouri mule.

Occasionally a senatorial career is made up almost of expense and suspense.

How can they expect to enlarge the circulations of the Congressional Record until they make it the right size to line the bureau drawer with?

The fools are not all dead yet. Mrs. Upton Sinclair and the poet Kemp have decided that they were not made for affluence, and have parted. Nuff said.

Secretary Knox, in his visit to the capitals of Central America will do much to do away with any misunderstandings regarding the intentions of this government.

Champ Clark is running like a house afire down in Missouri for the presidency. His Boomlet seems to be a very feeble one outside the jurisdiction of his own state.

The most remarkable financier of the present time is not to be found in Wall street. He is the man who can support his wife and nine children on an income of $12 a week.

The sunny South may be all right in the winter-time, but how is it the other nine months in the year?

When an ancient maiden finds that she has more affection than three cats can possibly absorb, she has a choice between a canary and a rubber plant.

Another month, and we can all have a laugh at the man with the fur coat.

Language somehow seems weak and pitiful when you are out walking and find suddenly that you have just lost both your rubbers in the mud.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

Keep Up the Navy.

If anything more is needed to convince the democratic majority of the popular branch of Congress of the folly of adhering to the vote of its caucus against the policy of building at least two battleships for the navy every year, Secretary Meyer, supplied it in his testimony before the naval affairs committee Monday. This nation cannot afford to neglect the upkeep of our fleet so wantonly as to permit Japan to outstrip us in sea power. Two battleships a year, constitute the minimum addition to our navy which prudence will permit.—Philadelphia Press.

Promoting Civilization.

Gen. T. Coleman du Pont, in proposing to devote a large part of his fortune to building good roads for Delaware, has chosen an interesting variation of the ordinary methods of philanthropy. In the announcement of his intention, as telegraphed from Wilmington, he expressed the conviction that "good roads will do more good than libraries, hospitals, and, in fact, than any of the usual forms of philanthropy." The miraculous growth of railroads in this country, and their assumption of the principal burdens of commerce blinded most of the people, until the advent of the automobile, to the imperative need for better common highways. The result has been a congestion of population at railroad centers and along railroad lines, with the consequent desertion or degeneration and non-development of

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

The snow blockade was nearly "raised" on Sunday afternoon, and on Monday the trains ran pretty regularly on the Eastern and P. S. & P. railroads. On Saturday no trains were started from Portland in any direction. On that day, the snow banks on the side of the track of the P. S. & P. railroad, at the Scarborough marshes, were so high that it was necessary to construct platforms, and shovel the snow from one platform to another. The snow plow with all the locomotives that could be brought to bear upon this—its required manual labor. What they have suffered down East may be inferred from the following, which we find in the Portland Grand Trunk train informs us that during the storm on Monday night, a house in the town of Mexico, occupied by two families, was entirely covered by the snow. An attempt was made by the occupants Tuesday morning, when they had discovered their condition, to knock off some boards from the cable end of the building, but this was unsuccessful. Their neighbors, however, had discovered their situation, and set to work to relieve the occupants. By tunneling forty feet through the enormous bank, they succeeded in reaching the front door of the house, which was immediately opened, and the frightened occupants of the dwelling were released from their precarious situation.

Counterfeit five-dollar treasury notes have made their appearance in New York. They are said to be good imitation, but can be detected by the letters U. S., one within the other, on the shield of the Goddess of Liberty, being left out.

Garrett Davis' Confiscation Bill, introduced in the Senate on Thursday, proposes to take away the property of the rebels during their lives, and appropriate it to the compensation of loyal men for their losses during the war.

Secretary Seward telegraphs to the New York Superintendent of Police rescinding the order requiring persons leaving the country to procure passports.

The Homestead bill passed the U. S. House of Representatives on Saturday, 105 to 16.

Claims That Drown Men.

Those of us whose acquaintances with clams embraces only the Little Neck variety are slow to think evil of any members of so delightful a family, but the inoffensive Little Neck has some big brothers who vigorously resent any attempt to pry into their personal affairs. Men have accidentally stepped into the open jaws of these huge clams at low tide, and the clams, closing their jaws, have held them fast until the tide rose, when the men were drowned. Other men have reached for a lure in the form of a luminous spot. The instant they touched it the shells of a clam closed on their arms, and in a few minutes the men were drowned. Some of these claims that trap men are founded imbedded in the coral reefs of the Pacific and Indian oceans, and the men captured are pearl divers. The flesh of one of these huge clams sometimes weighs twenty pounds, and added to that is the 500 pounds or more of shell. The shell is sometimes five feet long by two and three-quarters wide.—New York Herald.

The Moon's Mission.

Some partisans of final causes have imagined that the moon was given to the earth to afford it light during the night, but in this case nature would not have attained the end proposed since we are often deprived at the same time of the light of both sun and moon. To have accomplished this end it would have been sufficient to have placed the moon at first in opposition to the sun and in the plane of the elliptic at a distance from the earth equal to the one hundredth part of the distance of the earth from the sun and to have impressed on the earth and moon parallel velocities proportional to their distances from the sun. In this case the moon, being constantly in opposition to the sun, would have described round it an ellipse similar to that of the earth. These two bodies would then constantly succeed each other, and as at this distance the moon could not be eclipsed its light would always replace that of the sun.—Laplace.

The Transforming Touch of Genius.

The genius in tailoring accomplishes without effort things that refuse to yield to the most determined efforts of the ordinary mortal. He apparently creates out of nothing. His touch transforms the shape of the customer and the set of the garment. He molds the ungainly form into an Apollo, and the misfit garment falls into natural place in his hands. The lines of his draft are unapproachable, and his system is infallible. He knows just when the shoulder is to be advanced or retracted; he understands intuitively just how much the waist is to be suppressed or filled in and how much spring is required. He never makes a mistake, and if the journeyman runs a garment beyond repair in the making the genius sets it right with a few touches, even though to repair it is beyond the ordinary cutter's skill.—Tailor and Cutter.

Close Mouthed.

When Austin Lane Crothers was governor of Maryland he had the reputation of being harder to get information out of than any man the Maryland reporters ever knew. He wouldn't talk about any official matter.

A reporter who knew him very well was trying to find out whether he would call a special session of the legislature.

"Mr. Crothers," said the reporter, "in your conversations with Governor Crothers what does the governor say to you about a special session of the general assembly?"

"My son," whispered the governor, "the governor never talks to me on the subject. I can't get a word out of the close mouthed old rascal."—Saturday Evening Post.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

EXCELLENT SEED CAKES.
SEED cakes may be as rich as you please. If you know how to make Madeira cake, proceed as for that, add caraway seeds and serve.

A Rich Cake.

This recipe will provide a rather rich cake:
Spiced Seed Cake.—Use one pound of butter, six eggs, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, three-quarters of a pound of sifted sugar, pounded mace and grated nutmeg, to taste, one pound of flour, three-quarters of an ounce of caraway seeds and half a cup of cream.

Beat the butter to a cream, dredge in the flour, add the sugar, mace, nutmeg and caraway seeds and mix these ingredients well together. Whip the eggs, stir to them the cream and beat the cake again for ten minutes. Put it into a tin lined with buttered paper and bake from one and a half to two hours.

Light and Sweet.

Raised Seed Cake.—Take a pound of flour, half a pound of butter, three-quarters of a pound of powdered sugar, a half cup of good yeast, four tablespoonfuls of cream, nutmeg, a pinch of soda dissolved in hot water, two tablespoonfuls of caraway seed, one-fourth of a pound of citron shredded fine. Mix the flour, cream, half the nutmeg (milled) and the yeast together, work up very well and set to rise for six hours.

When very light work in the rest of the butter rubbed to a cream with the sugar, the soda water, and when these ingredients are incorporated the seed and the citron.

Let it rise three-quarters of an hour longer until it almost fills the pans and bake steadily half an hour if you have put it in small pans, an hour if it is in large loaves.

Nursery Seed Cake.—This cake is so plain that it is wise to serve it to the children instead of one of the richer varieties. Put half a pound of flour into a bowl, then take three ounces of butter and rub it into the flour; add to this two ounces of sugar, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a teaspoonful of caraway seeds and mix all with a wooden spoon.

Break an egg into a cup and beat it up with a gill of milk, pour this into the dry ingredients and work all to a stiff paste; put in a greased tin and let it bake for an hour.

When the cake seems baked, run a knife into the center of it, and if it comes out perfectly bright the cake is done. Set on its side on a sieve to cool.

India Spun Cotton Long Ago.

Lancashire's proud record of 300 years in the cotton trade is far behind India's. Cotton was manufactured in India more than 3,000 years ago. Thus Thomas Ellison in his "Cotton Trade of Great Britain": "Fabrics as fine as any that can be turned out at the present day by the most perfect machinery in Lancashire were produced by the nimble fingers of Hindu spinners and the primitive looms of Hindu weavers a thousand years before the invasion of Britain by the Romans." When Britons, in fact, were suffering from their skins Indians were "luxuriating in garments of a texture so fine as to have earned the poetic description of 'woven wind.'" What Lancashire makes today India made the day before yesterday.—Boston Chronicle.

Your Child.

Does your child break into the conversation when you have visitors?
Does he leave his clothes lying all over the house?
Does he eat surreptitiously between meals?
Does he lay his hands on almost anything he wants to make something out of without asking your permission?
Does he come down late to breakfast?
Does he say "Hub," "Gee?"
And, if not, why not. You are his parent, and he is living in the United States of America.—Life.

The Puzzle of Life.

Life is a quaint puzzle. Bits the most incongruous join into each other, and the scheme thus gradually becomes symmetrical and clear, when, lo, as the infant clasps his hands and cries, "See, see, the puzzle is made out!" all the pieces are swept back into the box—black box with the gilded nails!—Butter-Lytton.

High and Worthy.

She—I'm afraid I cannot marry you. I want a man who possesses a noble ambition, one whose heart is set on attaining some high and worthy object. He—Well, don't I want you? She—Oh, George, darling, I am yours.—Boston Transcript.

The Refrain.

She (at the piano)—How do you enjoy this refrain?
He—Very much. The more you refrain the better I like it.—Judge.

Spiteful.

Miss Joyce—Yes, Jack and I are to become partners for life. Miss Means—And you will be the senior partner. How nice!

Beware of dissipating your powers. Effuse constantly to concentrate them.

What Your Tailor?

Are Your Clothes Out of Shape?

Shrinking, puckering and breaking of the coat front is your clue to look for the interior backing—the hair-cloth and canvas—without which no coat can hold its shape. If you'd rip open a coat made by our famous Chicago tailors, Ed. V. PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR A BAD COLD

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion in Five Minutes

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomach, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at all drug stores waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

EDDYSTONE LIGHTHOUSE.

Its Massive Vertical Base Checks the Wildest Seas.

The Eddystone rocks form a very dangerous reef, lying in the English channel about fourteen miles from Plymouth, and here, in 1685, Henry Winstanley built the first lighthouse, which lasted but eight years.

Winstanley's tower was swept away by a tremendous storm, and every one in it at the time, including the builder, was drowned. Three years later Winstanley's tower was built, only to be destroyed by fire in 1755, and then came John Smeaton's.

Modern lighthouses really date from 1759, when this third one was completed. Smeaton's design was faulty, but it served as a model for lighthouse construction in masonry, which has been followed in its general features ever since. This lighthouse stood for over a century, but it was not high enough to keep the waves from dashing the lantern and so was removed and the present one built in 1882 by James Douglass.

At the time of the completion of the new lighthouse two bells weighing two tons each and struck by mechanical power were installed for fog signaling purposes. Since that date an explosive gunpowder fog signal has been erected, the bells being removed. Probably the most interesting thing about the lighthouse now on the Eddystone is its solid vertical base. Heavy seas striking the massive cylindrical structure are immediately broken up and rush around to the opposite side, spray alone ascending to the height of the lantern gallery. On the other hand, waves striking the old tower at its foundation ran up the surface, which presented a curved face to the waves, and, unimpeded by any projection until arriving at the lantern gallery, were partially broken up by the cornice and then spent themselves in heavy spray over the lantern. The shock to which the cornice of the gallery was exposed was so great that stones were sometimes lifted from their beds.—Lookout.

A HARD WINTER.

When the Mercury Fell to Six Feet Nine Inches Below Zero.

They were talking about hard winters. The man on the cracker barrel said he remembered a winter when the mercury fell to six feet nine inches below zero, and consequently he had never seen any weather since then that he could call real cold.

"Oh, you pshaw!" said the man with the ginger whiskers. "Six feet nine inches! Oh, you pshaw!"

"Meaning that I put you in mind of Ananias?" said the man on the cracker barrel.

The man with the ginger whiskers simply said: "Six feet nine inches! Oh, you pshaw!"

"Then listen," said the man on the cracker barrel. "It was the winter when no snow fell. Nothing fell but the thermometer that winter. We kept our thermometer hanging on a cherry tree in the yard to give it a chance. One morning the weather had been so cold the mercury went down below zero as far as it could and let the thermometer have the credit of showing it, but it couldn't do its duty by the weather by hanging there, so it busted the bulb at the bottom and kept on falling. The thermometer was six feet above the ground. We dug the mercury out in the spring, nine inches below the surface, so until you can trot out some-warmer than six feet and nine inches below, don't talk to me about cold!"

The man on the cracker barrel lit his pipe and went out, and the man with the ginger whiskers just said, "Oh, he pshaw!"—New York Press.

His Fortunate Mistake

It Brought Him Good Luck

By CLARISSA MACKIE

From the window of his luxurious private parlor Dick Lewis looked down at the brilliant color and continuous movement of life on Fifth avenue. The great hotel which he had entered with awe and some misgiving in his new role of millionaire mine owner was situated on the fashionable thoroughfare, and his rooms were on the fourth floor. From his windows he had an excellent view of the daily parade of wealth and fashion, and he had soon wearied of it. He was a stranger in New York, and because of his natural reserve and reticence he had not yet been discovered by those human cultures of society whose instinct it is to prey upon the guileless newcomer and separate him from his money. As a matter of fact, Dick Lewis had renounced cards and gambling of any sort ever since one night in a Gold Creek mining camp when he had witnessed the killing of three men over a game of poker.

There was no one to know that he was a stranger in the city—a raw westerner who had made a lucky strike in Nevada and who had come in to the great metropolis to see life and to spend his money. So far he had been safe.

As he looked down at the continuous stream of automobiles and carriages in the broad avenue, at the multitude of strangers, a sense of loneliness assailed him for the first time since his arrival. He turned from the window and picked up the morning paper.

"If this is all there is to New York," he muttered grimly, "I guess I'll hike back to Gold Creek and settle down."

DICK LEWIS FOUND THE WIDOW SCHMIDT a house of his own. That Hilltop property would be a mighty fine site for a house.

Dick Lewis was a handsome man even when he frowned, as he was doing now over the dry details of the want columns, in which he had not the slightest interest. His hair was black, thickly sprinkled with gray that made him look older than his thirty-five years. His eyes were large and gray, with a keen, compelling glance that attracted interest in any one who met him casually.

"Well—I'll be—!" whistled Dick as his roving eye lit on an advertisement in the personal column of the paper:

A poor widow with four children about to be placed in an orphan asylum begs the assistance of some benevolent person in preventing the breaking up of her little family. Address Mrs. E. box 27F.

"He himself had once been the inmate of such an institution, and he had always remembered the homesick feeling that had attended his residence there.

It was characteristic of him that he drew paper and pen toward him and dictated a short note to Mrs. S. of the advertisement:

Dear Madam—If you will send your address to me, care of this hotel, I will be glad to call upon you concerning the matter mentioned in your advertisement of this date. Yours truly, RICHARD LEWIS.

When he addressed the envelope Dick did not notice that his glance had skipped a few lines and that the address he penned was the one appended to the one following that of the poor widow.

By noon the following day he received a businesslike little note:

Dear Sir—Please call at room 84, Luckly building, concerning advertisement.

F. SELDEN.

"F. Selden must be the widow," mused Dick, as he ate his luncheon in the splendid hotel restaurant. "Wonder what she's doing in an office building—why, of course she's a scrub woman and some kind-hearted fellow has allowed her to have her mail addressed there. I'll go down by and see her—makes me cold all over to think of those four youngsters being torn away from their mother's arms."

Room 84, Luckily building, proved to be tucked away in a corner at the end of a long, dark corridor. Dick Lewis knocked gently and then turned the knob and entered the office.

It was a small office and contained one window looking down on a dim side street far below. There was little office furniture, and what there was appeared to have been recently reclaimed from some secondhand store, for it was all pretty well battered and scuffed. However, everything was neat and clean and carefully arranged to the best of its poor advantage. There was a roll top desk and a long table and a couple of chairs. Beside the window was a typewriter on a stand, and seated at the machine was a young woman wearing a black dress and a black veil. She was looking at him as he entered the door.

Dick Lewis was tongue tied. He had seen many women in his life, but never one just like this. She was tall and slender, with a sweet, oval face lighted by soft brown eyes. Her golden brown hair was braided into a coronet above her white forehead. The dark eyebrows went up ever so slightly as she waited for her visitor to speak.

Suddenly it dawned upon Dick that this could not be the poor widow of whom he was in search. This young girl could not be the mother of four children, although her gravity and the mourning gown she wore lent her an air of maturity.

"You came in answer to my advertisement?" she questioned at last.

"Yes," stammered Dick, wiping the perspiration from his brow.

"Then you must be Mr. Lewis, for I only had one answer yesterday, and that was yours," she went on, motioning him to a chair and resuming her seat by the window.

"I was hoping I might be of some service to you," began Dick awkwardly. "You see, I've got more money than I know what to do with, and I came east to spend some of it, but it's mighty lonesome spending money all alone, and it's a confounded idiotic thing to do when there is so much need for it in the world. I suppose I sound kind of goofy, goody, but I'm not."

The girl in black stiffened and all the pretty color faded from her cheeks. Her brown eyes lost their gentle expression and became sharp and questioning. She arose with a single graceful movement and looked down upon him in the brief moment before he remembered to get upon his feet.

"I scarcely understand just what your business is with me, sir, but it is evident that you do not wish any typewriting done," she said thoughtfully. "Typewriting?" he echoed blankly. "I came to see if I couldn't help you keep those four kids out of the orphan asylum."

"Four kids—four children! What do you mean?" demanded F. Selden, her eyebrows knitted and her hand to her forehead. "I am referring to your advertisement in yesterday's Trumpet," Dick was on his feet now and looking down at her disordered face.

"I don't know what you mean. I didn't advertise for an orphan asylum," she said confusedly.

"No, no, of course not. Only, you see, I got your answer to my inquiry, and I supposed you were the party—poor widow wanting help to keep four children out of the orphan asylum," exclaimed Dick.

F. Selden shook her head and a faint smile curved her pink lips. A slender hand went up to smooth the golden brown braid, and Dick's heart leaped strangely to notice that there was no wedding ring upon the third finger of that left hand—indeed the finger was quite bare of rings.

"I am Miss Selden, and I do typewriting here. Business was so dull that I placed an advertisement in yesterday's Trumpet. I noticed the other advertisement just above my own. You must have addressed your envelope to me instead of your widow."

"I must have done that," admitted Dick with some chagrin as Miss Selden produced a copy of the Trumpet and showed him his error. "So that widow didn't get my letter after all. I shall have to write her another one. Perhaps—perhaps you'd write it on the machine for me."

Before he wrote the letter he told her all about himself and his trip to New York and how glad he was to find a useful way to spend some of his money. She listened with sympathy, and after the letter was written and properly addressed Dick found courage to voice a great desire.

"Miss Selden, I wonder if you'd let me come up tomorrow or next day and report on the case of the widow?"

"I shall be interested to hear the outcome," said Miss Selden politely.

Dick Lewis found the Widow Schmidt as poor as her advertisement hinted at. It gave him pleasure to set her up in business in a small notion store in the suburbs.

Dick's greatest delight was in telling all this to Freda Selden, who listened with genuine interest. He called on her once more and gave her a bulky package of papers to be copied, and that time he was introduced to her widowed mother, who happened to be in the office at the moment.

Lewis didn't see as much of New York as he had intended, his time being taken up with hunting manuscripts for Miss Selden to copy. He wrote to all his friends to send him manuscripts to be typewritten, he to pay all costs. He discovered that every friend he had in the world had at some time been innoculated with the literary fever.

When Dick Lewis went back to Gold Creek to build his handsome home on the hilltop he carried with him a bride and a mother-in-law as well as the blessings of the entire Schmidt family.

The Modern Rome.

Does the world advance in spirals, and are we now in a larger way repeating the history of Rome at the time of the first Caesars? Many parallels have been pointed out, some of them almost startling in their resemblance. For example, the group surrounding Julius Caesar and that associated with William McKinley were surprisingly alike. Whether in politics, industry, religion or morals the similarity is apparent.

Professor Guglielmo Ferrero, the celebrated Italian historian, who has delved deeper into Roman history perhaps than any other man now living, recently pointed out another alarming likeness between the American today and the Roman yesterday. It is found in the growth of cities and high prices. In Rome the people flocked so rapidly to the cities and were so eager for wealth, money so concentrated into a few hands and luxury and materialism became so prevalent that the farms were abandoned through lack of men to work them, prices rose to ruinous heights, and in the end the Roman legions became effeminate and were a prey to the harder races of the north and west. This, in the view of Ferrero, was the chief cause of Rome's downfall.

It is well to look these things in the face, not that we should become pessimists and fatalists, believing that there is no escape from following the old paths, but rather that, seeing, we may turn from them. There is no fate that dooms us to a given course. We are our own fate and can find and follow the right way. But we must be about it quickly. Blindly to deny or weakly to despair is neither the part of intelligence or courage. This is not a work for dailies or weeklies. There are new elements in modern civilization that will save it—provided we help.

By Miss Peck, the mountain climber, the suffragette flag has been placed upon the highest peak of the Andes. Well, few men will be heartless enough to object to woman suffrage on the highest peak of the Andes.

A New Jersey woman absentmindedly put her pocketbook in the oven. Either she had money to burn or wanted to bake her roll. Help!

Present day authors might do well to leave affidavits that Bacon did not write their works.

Sun Yat Sen's Renunciation.
Well did the Chinese national assembly say of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's withdrawal from the presidency of the Chinese republic, made in order that Yuan Shih Kai might be elected in his stead, that "such an example of purity of purpose and self sacrifice is unparalleled in history."

For years Dr. Sun had risked his life, suffered banishment from his native land and had worked night and day to spread republican principles and raise funds for the cause of revolution in order that China might be free. How well he planned the uprising was shown by its speedy triumph. Yet when his efforts had borne fruit and he had been made the first president of the Washington of China, he cheerfully relinquished it all for the purpose of uniting the north and south, which the revolution had split asunder.

Yuan Shih Kai may be an able administrator and doubtless will make a strong and successful president of the republic which in the beginning he opposed. Yet he will hold no such place in the affections of China and of the world as Dr. Sun gained by this single act of renunciation. So long as men love usefulness, devotion to principle, perseverance and untiring service for liberty, so long will the name and fame of Sun Yat Sen be held in remembrance.

For years this man had a price on his head of $50,000 offered by the Manchuk government. Once he barely escaped with his life from China, and at another time he was kidnapped by the Chinese legation in London and only got away through the intercession of the British government. To him more than to any other man is due the fact that China is now a republic.

A St. Louis woman who is suing for divorce kept a diary in which she put the number of nights her husband stayed out. Thus is man a slave in time. He is docked if late to work in the morning and clocked if late home at night.

Colonel Roosevelt has received a medal from France for his faunal naturalism. Well, nobody can make political capital out of that, at any rate.

By the way, what has become of the war between Italy and Turkey?

In Mexico it is just one uprising after another.

Relics of the Capet Family.

The descendants of Edward the Confessor, who was housekeeper of the Temple when the Capet family were here, gave to the Capet family a relic, some of the things which Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette left in their rooms when they were taken to the scaffold. There are two chambers of fine linen belonging to Marie Antoinette. The crown which was unbroken on them has been picked out, and only the initial "M." remains. There is a black silk blouse, very much worn and mended in several places, which Marie Antoinette made with her own hands in prison and which was worn by the princess royal after her father's execution. There are also two pairs of the king's silk stockings (darned rather badly), a pair of "Mme. Royale's" little slippers, a crystal bottle which has a few drops of Marie Antoinette's favorite scent remaining in it and Louis XVI's shaving dish. But perhaps the most pathetic of the relics of the monarchy which went to pieces on the scaffold is a game of bric-a-brac with which the little dauphin, whose fate has always been and always will be a mystery, used to amuse himself in prison.

Turkish Women at the Theater.

A notice which is to be seen in one of the theaters of Constantinople, effectively solves the problem of people at the back obtaining a clear view and is very much more radical than the polite request made in English and French theaters that ladies should not mar the view of the stage with ugly hats. The notice reads: "In order to render the performance agreeable to all those present the management of the theater has decided that the spectators of the first three rows should recline, those of the next three rows be on their knees and all the others be standing up. In that way everybody will be able to enjoy the play." This notice is followed by a suggestion implying the Turkish woman's lack of romance, "It is strictly forbidden to laugh, for it is a tragedy that is being performed."—Le Monde Artistique.

Entirely Too Literal.

Some people are too literal for anything. A young man gave a graphic description of a narrow escape that he had recently had from an engaged bull:

"I seized him by the tail!" he exclaimed, "and there I was. I was afraid to hold on and I dare not let go."

"Between the horns of a dilemma, as it were," ventured a young lady, very much interested.

"No," replied the young man; "I wasn't between the horns at all, and, besides, he wasn't a dilemma; he was a Jersey."—London Mail.

EDISONIAN THEATER.

Freeman's Hall.

Weather Reports indicated that sales of laughter have been sweeping through the Edisonian. The manager has something that is still funnier than the Noodle Noodle Boys were.

It is evident that the women folks appreciate the liveliest kind of vaudeville show, and with this in view the management will this week offer a program of marked excellence.

Conspicuous among the favorites will be found Hilton, the comedy juggler, the funniest man on earth. Warren the great comedy magic act, is an act of real merit, and George Hazard eccentric dancing a very pleasing specialty. We make our afternoon show especially attractive for ladies and children.

Our picture program for Monday and Tuesday will contain five of the funniest pictures ever manufactured which are, "The Doctor's Dilemma," comedy, "A Pair of Shoes," comedy, "A Tragic Joke," American comedy, "Spare the Rod and the Tem Boy," a great heart to heart story, making a bill full of snap and ginger. THE POLICE BROKE UP PARTY. Mrs. Melton Livra had a Sunday party at her domicile on Russell street on Sunday afternoon and the affair would have been a great success if the police had kept away.

The festivities were at a high pitch when suddenly the liquor squad appeared on the scene. There was one large room full of guests all enjoying a bottle of brew. Everybody got excited and there was a rush for the front door. The police flashed a writ on Melton and then gathered up a case of beer which had not been consumed, which they dragged up to the liquor closet at the station along with Mrs. Livra who will be heard today on a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

RAILROAD NOTES

The Concord Monitor says that there is no truth in the story published in Exeter that the Exeter, Hampton and Amesbury street railway is to take over the bankrupt Portsmouth and Exeter road.

Daniel W. Miller, a member of the crew of wigwags at the Boston and Maine round house at Dover was badly hurt, but not dangerously by being hit by a smoke-jack which broke and fell on him. Miller was working around an engine when the accident occurred. It is said that the metal that had held the smoke-jack in place rusted off. The jack is the apparatus used in raising the smoke-vent in the round-house roof over the stack of a locomotive.

Miller was removed to the Wentworth hospital immediately after the accident. He was dazed but not unconscious. A rumor circulated, however that he had been killed or fatally injured.

Perry A. Eaton, assistant roadmaster of the Boston and Maine railroad has been placed on the retired list after 55 years of service, at the age of 75. He had served either as roadmaster or assistant roadmaster for 45 years. Mr. Eaton entered the service of the old Northern railroad on May 11, 1856, and for many years had charge of the branch line between this city and Concord.

Signal lights on Portsmouth and Dover branch of the Boston and Maine have been changed at flag stations. In the future a green light will be a clearance and yellow will denote that passengers are to board a train.

It was reported at the railroad station today that the hours of the night switchmen crew would be changed. At present the shifter and men go to work at 2 p. m. and conclude at 22 p. m. Under the change they are to go to work at 7 p. m. and conclude at 7 a. m.

MUST BE ACTUALLY IN NEED. Chief Boatwain W. L. Hill, of the U. S. S. Southern in a letter to the Herald says: "It has always been the policy of the Navy Department to allow a man serving sentence by reason of court-martial to allot his pay to his family if it is proven to the satisfaction of the Department that his family is actually in need."
